

SLACA CALL FOR PAPERS – AAA 2018

The Society for Latin American and Caribbean Anthropology (SLACA) would like to invite colleagues to submit executive sessions, volunteered sessions, and poster presentations for the AAA Annual Meeting in San Jose, CA (November 14-18, 2018). The Society welcomes experiential, innovative, and collaborative sessions, individual papers, and posters that focus on the critical study of social and cultural processes in Latin America and the Caribbean as well as those who have migrated from Latin America and the Caribbean to other parts of the world.

We particularly welcome submissions that engage creatively with this year's conference theme Change in the Anthropological Imagination: Resistance, Resilience, and Adaptation, which is a timely call to action that address the themes of resistance, resilience, and adaptation from a wide range of perspectives. Anthropologists are encouraged to explore many of the pressing issues facing our discipline and our world and to demonstrate how a focus on change can be a positive force for groundbreaking anthropological research, new forms of cultural understanding, scientific awareness, and global empathy. SLACA invites submissions considering how these developments have contributed to the (re)writing of histories and movements, presents and futures, and what role anthropologists might play in them.

The deadline for Executive Session submissions is Wednesday, February 14 2018 at 3pm EST.

The deadline for Invited and Volunteered Panel, Individual Paper, Roundtable Sessions, and Poster Submissions is Monday April 16, 2018 at 3pm EST

Submissions for executive and volunteered sessions should contain a session title and abstract (of no more than 500 words) and individual abstracts (of no more than 250 words), paper title and keywords. Individual papers and poster submission should contain a presentation title, abstract (of no more than 250 words), and keywords.
